

Talk presented at the European Coating Symposium in Paris, 2007

Jens Eggers

School of Mathematics,

University of Bristol, University Walk,

Bristol BS8 1TW, United Kingdom

jens.egg@bris.ac.uk

We give a review of two central issues in the study of moving contact lines. First, how is hydrodynamics to be modified in the immediate neighborhood of the contact line? Second, we discuss transitions and instabilities that occur in advancing and receding contact lines as they are forced to move faster than a critical speed.